

Galerie

The Artful Life: 5 Things Galerie Editors Love This Week

From two new versions of Louis Vuitton's iconic Bed Trunk to model residences designed by Josh Greene at the Waldorf Astoria in New York

BY GALERIE EDITORS

SEPTEMBER 24, 2024

interior of the Josh Greene-designed model residence at the Waldorf Astoria New York.
PHOTO: COLIN MILLER

interior of the Josh Greene-designed model residence at the Waldorf Astoria New York.
PHOTO: COLIN MILLER

3. Waldorf Astoria Unveils Model Residences Designed by Josh Greene

It's hard to fathom that seven years have passed since the Waldorf Astoria closed its doors, but the grand Park Avenue landmark is ready to spring back to life following an extensive renovation. The first step is the debut of the Waldorf Astoria Residences New York, which introduced a three-bedroom model apartment, conceived by Josh Greene. "Waldorf Astoria New York is an icon, so it was an honor to work on this incredible, hotly anticipated project," says Greene. "For the decor, I wanted to mix gracious Park Avenue living with midtown's 1970s glamor through the use of sumptuous materials, a mix of custom and antique furnishings, and top-notch artwork." Working in conjunction with celebrated interior architect Jean-Louis Deniot, Greene conceived the space—one of the 375 private residences, which range from studios to four bedrooms—in a spirited medley of rich jewel tones and upscale accoutrements by Little Greene Paint Company, Florense, Lee Jofa, Gracie, and more. Residents at the reimagined Waldorf Astoria, which will open later this year, will have unfettered access to 50,000 square feet of private amenities, including a pool deck and spa, as well as the appointed restaurants helmed by Chef and partner Michael Anthony. —Jill Sieracki

